Brass quintet set for concert season premier

The opening concert of the 92-93 White Rock Concert season presents Calgary-based Foothills Brass Quintet on Friday evening, Oct. 30, 8 p.m. at White Rock Baptist Church.

The Foothills concert is the first of this year's four-event program, which will include appearances of the celebrated Joe Trio in November, Little Eagles of Siberia in February and the Victory Symphony Orchestra under conductor Peter McCoppin in April.

Foothills Brass from Calgary are recognized as one of the leading exponents of brass instrumental music on tour in Canada. They have performed extensively throughout Canada and the United States, and have toured abroad to Israel and Europe under the auspices of External Affairs. Their program ranges from brass music of pre-Bach days to contemporary works which feature the brilliant sounds of modern brass instruments. Under the direction of trumpeter Chris Morrison, Foothills has emerged as an outstanding ensemble on the national and international scene.

Memberships for the 92-93 season are still available, with ticket depots conveniently located at Flying High in Semiahmoo Mall, Carillon Music at King George Highway and 70th Avenue, and Candlelight Cuisine in the Ocean Park Shopping Plaza.

According to White Rock Concerts' chairperson Dene Chernaske, the 92-93 membership has already exceeded last year's total. "This is our second season at the new concert venue," she stated. "We expect an increase in our membership this year, and as always if there are enough new subscribers we will be able to present a bonus event later in the year."

White Rock Concerts has presented an additional bonus concert for subscribers in each of the past three seasons.
